MESSAGE FROM THE BOARD

G. Arnold Mulder, M.D., President

One of the features of good garden design is to risk having some plants that test the extremes of our weather. These plants are often the spice that can make a garden glow, but not this year. We froze, but fortunately most of the damage was to the soft, "fleshy" plants that can be easily replaced. We hope your gardens got through ok. Our thoughts are with the fruit growers who are seriously hurt by the freeze.

Speaking of good design, we are busy (I should say really busy) getting ready for the LA Garden Show. It is the first weekend in May with a theme of "Designing Your Garden". The team that is preparing it for you is amazing. We will have lots of new things to show off and, as usual, great unique plants for sale – save the date May 5 & 6

See you there.

"Your Garden design gives pleasure to the eye in its presentation, in fragrances of seasonal blooms and peace for the soul."

Jane R. Herrmann, LA Garden Show Chairperson

The Arboretum's mission is to cultivate our natural, horticultural and historic resources for learning, enjoyment and inspiration.

Our vision is to be one of the world's truly great arboretums and botanic gardens—the garden which best reflects Southern California's distinct climate, community and openness to new ideas.

DEAR ARBORETUM MEMBERS

Mark K. Wourms, Ph.D., CEO

The Arboretum is proud to bring you the largest outdoor garden show on the west coast the weekend of May 5 and 6, 9:00 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. The 2007 LA Garden Show presented by Monrovia Growers carries a theme of "Designing Your Garden", a tribute to designers and the visionary artistry they provide in making our outdoor living areas functional, beautiful and inspiring. You will see a dozen garden designs by the best designers in Southern California, including a new permanent exhibit, which you will read about in this edition of the Members' Magazine.

The LA Garden Show continues to grow in its offerings and is already on its way to being a regional draw in Southern California. We hope you will take advantage of the lectures, demonstrations and book signings by well-known garden experts and authors.

A garden show cannot be without plants and The Marketplace will feature over forty specialty vendors with a huge selection of hearty plants and the latest specialty garden décor, tools and furniture. A wide variety of rare and hard-to-find plants as well as your colorful favorites will be for sale, including those from The Arboretum's own collections.

For those interested in previewing the show with music, hors d'oeuvres, wine by Sanford Winery & Vineyards and drawing opportunities, an opening night preview reception will be held on Friday, May 4. Preview and purchase 4:30 to 6:00 P.M. and reception 6:00 to 9:00 P.M. Tickets are $75 per person and support The Arboretum's gardens and programs. To purchase tickets call 626.821.3237.

We hope to see you here.

PLANTS & PEOPLE

Timothy R. Phillips, Superintendent

A Fat and Prickly Exhibit Opens at The Arboretum

I love extreme plants. The plant world is filled with them, most having evolved in the world's most extreme environments--those seemingly inhospitably arid lands we call deserts.

The Arboretum will proudly present its Madagascar Spiny Forest, unveiling at the 2007 LA Garden Show May 5 & 6. This permanent exhibit will celebrate botanical diversity and educate our visitors on the importance of plant conservation and promote the awareness of arid plants. This will be the only garden of its kind in Southern California and possibly the largest public collection of Spiny Forest plant material outside of Madagascar.

Geographically isolated, the island of Madagascar is about as far as far gets from Southern California. Because of the island's size, geographical isolation, and diverse topography it is home to a plethora of unique flora and fauna found nowhere else on the planet. When humans arrived into Madagascar a couple thousand years ago, a handful of its animal inhabitants fell into the category of megafauna. The very large flightless birds were most notable; some of which would have literally made our modern day ostriches look like geese. There were lemurs the size of apes, as well as many other interesting creatures that are now extinct. Likewise, the island's flora was and still is, very unique. However, as with many of the animal species, much of the island's habitat has disappeared and is rapidly being depleted by grazing practices, firewood collection and illegal collection of some of the much sought after plant species.

Madagascar is predominantly a tropical island; however, due to the extremes in elevations and its extension southward beyond the Tropic of Capricorn, there are significant temperature differences found from region to region. The Spiny Forest habitat occupies the southwest section of the island and has a climate similar to the deserts of central and southern Baja California.

The rich flora that makes up the Spiny Forest is, like many other desert floras around the world—extreme. One family, endemic to this arid southwest region, is the Didiereceae. This family is comprised of four genera: Alluaudia, Alluaudiopsis, Decaryia, and Didierea. All of these genera, superficially look alike--having one major feature in common--spines. Remarkably, in form and function, this family closely resembles the North American desert family of plants called the Fouquieriaceae. The best known in this family are Fouquiera columnaris, commonly known as the Boojum Tree of Central Baja; and Fouquiera splendens, or the Ocotillo of the American South West. These plant families are similar due to a phenomenon known as convergent evolution; plants (and other organisms) that are unrelated and grow in climatically similar, but geographically distant habitats. They have adapted to the climates by developing similar adaptive characteristics and traits. Arid land plants often have spines no matter where the arid land is.

Madagascar is also home to an abundance of palm species and aloes, many of which grow remarkably well in Southern California when given adequate horticultural attention. Of them, only two species are known to occur in the Spiny Forest. They include the world famous Dypsis decaryi, commonly known as the Triangle Palm, and Ravenea xerophila, a very rare, slow growing feather palm that has adapted to the harsh environs of the Spiny Forest through the production of thick, fleshy carrot-like roots.

The most-well known group of Spiny Forest plants, commonly sold in nurseries under the name Madagascar Palm, belong to the Genus Pachypodium. These plants produce beautiful fragrant white flowers and maintain a shield of formidable spines that blanket their bulbous trunk. The Arboretum will also feature various species of aloes found in the Spiny Forest including the Aloe vaombe and A. suzanneae. Both of these species become very large and like many of the aloes from the African continent, produce their flowers in the winter months.

I invite you to explore the world with us and see this fat and prickly new permanent exhibit.

BLOOM

Jim Bauml, Ph.D., Senior Biologist

At the south end of the Meadowbrook Section, across from the Herbs of the World Garden, a slow transformation has taken place. An extensive collection of over 400 different varieties of daylilies (Hemerocallis) have been added to the landscape through the dedication and hard work of Frank Cusenza and other members of the Southern California Hemerocallis and Amaryllis Society (SCHAS). They are planted along the edges of a walking trail that will eventually be a paved walk. Plants are grouped by colors and by types, including "UFOs" or "unusual forms". Even more plants are scheduled to be added. Look for a long-lasting display of colorful blooms as spring arrives.

Contact the plant information line 626.821.3239 or plantinfo@arboretum.org to learn more about what's in bloom.

GET INVOLVED

If you like special events and working with people, The Arboretum is in need of volunteers like you. We are looking for enthusiastic individuals who would like to give their time in support of The Arboretum's activities.

3rd Annual Great Easter Egg Hunt

Saturday, April 7

2007 LA Garden Show

Saturday & Sunday May 5 & 6

If you are interested in volunteering for either of the above mentioned events, or for general information on volunteering at The Arboretum, please contact Lisa Beach, Volunteer Manager, at 26.821.5897 or lisa.beach@arboretum.org.

CONNECT

As a member of The Arboretum you may have questions about your membership benefits. Every quarter we will answer your questions here.

How does The Arboretum Reciprocal Program work?

As a member of The Arboretum you receive free admission and additional benefits at other botanic gardens, arboreta, and conservatories throughout North America. A list of participating institutions is available online at www.ahs.org. Please be aware that the list is subject to change. Before visiting any garden, be sure to visit its website or call to verify its hours of operation and get the latest updates on programs and other information. Please remember to carry your Arboretum membership card with you when you travel to reciprocating gardens.

For membership information call 626.821.3233, seven days a week, 9am-4pm

GRAPEVINE

The Peacock Café

Barbara West has been a caterer in the Pasadena area for over 21 years. Her business has expanded to service many prestigious University of Southern California and Los Angeles Times events, as well as many private clients. Her restaurant "Barbara's at the Brewery" is located in the Brewery Arts Colony in Los Angeles. Her repertoire includes multi-course sit down dinners for small or large numbers to picnics, buffets and station parties for a few to three thousand. Together with her capable and talented staff, she hopes to bring the same event planning and performance to The Arboretum.

"Our vision for the Peacock Café and catering operations is to provide the highest quality food and service, while taking steps to be environmentally sensitive." Says Greg Semancik, manager of The Peacock Café.

Matthew Semancik, Executive chef is a graduate of the Le Cordon Bleu Chef program from the California School of Culinary Arts in Pasadena. He has worked with some of the finest chefs and restaurants in Los Angeles such as Ludovic Lefebvre at Bastide and Christophe Eme at Ortolan along with spending time working at the Sissenou in Biarritz, France. Tiffany Martin and David Abrams are also alums from Le Cordon Bleu Chef program from the California School of Culinary Arts in Pasadena.

The café serves weekly specials on dinnerware and uses compostable plates, cups, and utensils made of sugar cane, corn, and potato starch. Using herbs from the Organic Vegetable Garden, they hope to make their foods unique to The Arboretum experience. They are working towards composting appropriate kitchen waste right in the garden.

The Peacock Café is Open daily 9-4pm
For catering call 626.447.0641.

Discover the Fun

The Arboretum has launched its new Discovery Cart program with the generous support of Southern California Edison and Arboretum volunteers. Look out for this colorful cart with the umbrella around the garden. It is full of educational and fun activities for kids of various ages. It will make learning about our natural world even more fun.

On For the Ride

Did you know The Arboretum is only 15 miles away from downtown Los Angeles? According to AAA, a 15 mile round-trip equals $7.73 of gas. Consider riding public transportation to The Arboretum one day. You can take the Gold Line and catch the MTA bus line 268 or the Foothill Transit line 187. An MTA day pass is $3.00 and valid on all MTA bus lines and the local fare for Foothill Transit is $1.00. The average travel time from Union Station in downtown to The Arboretum is about 55 minutes. Imagine all the reading and site seeing you can do while you ride through historic Los Angeles.

Electric Vehicle Charge Up Station

For all those who now own electric or hybrid vehicles, The Arboretum has an electric vehicle charge up station right in the parking lot. There are 4 stations available on the north side of the main parking lot. Charge up your vehicle while you have lunch at The Peacock Café or take a leisurely stroll through the gardens.

DISCOVERY TRAILS

California's Fields of Beauty

Steve Eubank, Arboretum Librarian

There's an agave that I didn't get to visit when I lived at Grand Canyon National Park. It's named Agave phillipsiana. It is known from only four very remote locations deep, inside the canyon, where three out of the four locations are associated with archaeological sites. Wendy Hodgson, Senior Research Botanist at Desert Botanical Garden and the botanist, who named the agave, determines that it is a "relictual cultivar" created and tended by pre-Columbian peoples. Arizona has four other examples of agaves developed this way. When I learned about these, it was one of those "wow" moments for me when I more clearly understood how humans and plants have had deep and intense relationships with each other as long as humans have existed.

Another experience I had at Grand Canyon (because I was one of the founders of the Grand Canyon Book Club) was reading endless books, which were always well written, about a person from the East who was writing about the wonders of the "West." As a westerner I was always a little peeved that I hadn't thought to share my varied experiences, because I always thought the Easterners were a little too astonished that the desert actually had plants in it. But when I came back to Southern California, I was reminded that westerners often take their astonishing beauties for granted. The San Gabriel Mountains, in which I was nestled as a youngster (in Hastings Ranch, Pasadena), have revealed their grandeur to me as a returning adult. What a magnificent backdrop for our Arboretum, a beautiful view up my street on the way home and an incredible geological phenomenon.

California's fields of wildflowers in Antelope Valley, the Carrizo Plain, the Santa Rosa Plateau, Table Mountain, the Kern County foothills and Anza Borrego are remnant icons which resonate what the first Spanish visitors such as Father Juan Crespi, described when he journeyed north in California in 1770. The fields were perceived as natural or untamed wilderness, but we now know that much of California was a managed landscape by the native peoples of California who used fire, selective harvesting, tilling, sowing, weeding and transplanting to create that environment. This knowledge evolved over the 10,000 year history of indigenous

Here at The Arboretum we are creating our own little section where we are "tending the wild." Beneath the Englemann oak (Quercus engelmannii) grove and up to the top of the south side of Tallac Knoll we have scattered California wild flower seeds. Last March the wildflowers created a wonderful carpet-like display and this spring we expect an equal or more glorious spread depending on the Southern Californian famously fickle rain patterns. Out of the sixteen species we scattered six were readily identifiable last year. Three of those species can be clearly documented as extant in the Pasadena, Santa Anita area as late as 1895. They are California Poppy (Eschscholzia californica), Baby Blue Eyes (Nemophila menziesii) and Tidytips (Layia platyglossa). This year more will probably sprout. Come take your jaded western eyes and reappreciate California's fields of beauty. Here at The Arboretum we tend for fleeting beauty and so our future generations will understand why humans and plants are intertwined.

MAKING A DIFFERENCE

Angie and Jerry Gyllenskog

The Arboretum has received a wondrous gift from Angie and Jerry Gyllenskog of Covina, California. It is their gem, mineral and fossil collection created from a lifetime of collecting.

There are many unusual gems and minerals and a special interest in scenes created from slices of rocks. The Arboretum is especially grateful for the varied specimens of petrified wood, roots and cones.

These items tie our living plant collections to past geologic eras.

One fossil of particular interest is the sequoia cone from the Eocene or Oligocene (as much as 55 million years ago) which is closely related to the same kind of tree still living today and growing in The Arboretum near the northwest edge of the lagoon.

The collection is housed in The Arboretum Library open Tuesday-Saturday 8:00 a.m.-5:15 p.m. and every other Saturday 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Come visit and see the wonders.
